

THE RELATION BETWEEN THE HIV INFECTION AND SPORTS

Abstract

The present study found an extremely low risk of HIV infection in sports people. This suggested that sports people could become infected either during unprotected sexual intercourse or by drug injection rather than by doing contact sports.

Performing constant or interval aerobic exercise may be beneficial and appears to be safe for adults living with HIV/AIDS.

Keywords: HIV infection, sports people, exercise.